

Floorplan Fit

Choose the trailer that fits how you actually camp.

Start Here: How Will You Actually Camp?

Before you compare trailers, get honest about how you will use one.

- ☐ Weekend trips or long road trips?
- ☐ RV parks, state parks, boondocking, hunting, beach, or mountains?
- ☐ How many people will usually sleep inside?
- ☐ Will pets come with you?
- ☐ Do you need bunks?
- ☐ Do you cook mostly inside or outside?
- ☐ Do you need solar or off-grid capability?
- ☐ Will you camp in cold, rain, or wind?
- ☐ Do you need to access the bathroom and fridge while traveling?
- ☐ What matters more: space, towing comfort, storage, price, or build quality?

Buyer rule

The best trailer is not the one with the most features. It is the one that fits your vehicle, your budget, and the way you actually camp.

Floorplan Reality Check

A great floorplan works on a rainy day, at bedtime, and during a roadside stop.

☐	Where will everyone sleep?	☐	Can you access the fridge while traveling?
☐	Is the bed easy to use?	☐	Can you access the bathroom with the slide closed?
☐	Do you need bunks?	☐	Is there enough storage?
☐	Does the dinette actually fit your family?	☐	Is there enough rainy-day space?
☐	Is the bathroom usable?	☐	Where will pets sleep?
☐	Is there enough kitchen space?	☐	Where will dirty shoes, towels, and bags go?

Floorplan rule

Picture everyone inside the camper at night, tired, hungry, and frustrated. If the layout still works, it may be a good fit.
